

Disclaimer

This site is for information and debate. It tries to shed light on a complex subject that spends billions of pounds of billpayers' and taxpayers' money.

Not advice

Nothing here is financial, investment, legal or professional advice. Do not make a decision about money, a contract or a legal matter on the strength of this site alone. Check the source document, and take advice where you need it.

How the figures are presented

- Every figure is given as published by the source named beside it, at the date shown. Sources publish revisions; a figure here can be overtaken by a later one.
- Each figure carries a label: `OFFICIAL`, `FILED`, `COMPUTED`, `ESTIMATE` or `PRESS`. Where this site did the arithmetic, the working is shown. Estimates are labelled as estimates.
- The evidence register gives the document and the place in it for each Moray Firth figure, and says where a figure could not be checked.

Opinion is labelled

Where the site gives a view or an assessment rather than a published figure, it says so, for example "in the fleet manager's assessment". Readers can weigh those views for themselves.

No allegation of wrongdoing

The site describes what public documents show and what they leave out. It does not allege that any person or company has acted unlawfully, dishonestly or in bad faith. Where a figure is missing, that means it has not been published, not that anything has been hidden for an improper reason.

Ships and positions

Vessel names, positions and destinations come from public ship-tracking broadcasts (AIS) and from notices that wind farm operators publish. Positions are approximate. The site describes where ships are and what published notices say they are doing; it does not comment on the people on board.

Right of reply and corrections

Any company or public body named here can send a correction or a response to the address below. A correction backed by a document is made promptly and dated on the About page. A named organisation's response can be published alongside the figure it concerns, at its request.
